Having just returned from California where we were Portland tourists, my husband and I utilized the ferry boat system which operates almost hourly between the island community of Coronado and San Diego. It wasn't until we observed its operation and convenience as tourists that we noted how similar their situation is with ours - that of relieving traffic - theirs being traffic over the Coronado bridge at peak hours. The times we used the ferry during the day to and from our hotel, we noted its use by students, tourists, cyclists, etc. and the boat was moderately filled each time we hopped aboard.

We returned to Portland - looking for updated info regarding this possibility for Portland. If you have have a hand in supporting it, thanks for your efforts on behalf of our city! I think we'd love it!
